TODAY – IT'S ALL ABOUT THE BEHAVIOURS!

Most of us have heard or used the phrase "I like/don't like X's attitude" – the reality is that we can't see attitudes, but we can see behaviours.

First of all, we have a right to our own attitudes and beliefs, as they are rooted in our personal experience. However, this can be a self-fulfilling bias!

Our attitude about anything comes out in our behaviours. It appears in how we act, especially regarding other people.

If I act in a negative way towards a work colleague (because they remind me of someone else, or they represent a group that I find difficult), their attitude towards me is affected by this, because they react to my unreasonable behaviour.

Thus a circle can be created. I act, which affects your attitude, which affects your behaviour, which affects my attitude, which affects my actions.

Notice how our behaviour affects other people. We can break the unconscious loop by spotting how the behaviour of others makes us feel and actively resisting its potential to let it affect our attitude.

We can't undo our personal history, but we can choose how we behave towards others. That way, we can create a 'virtuous cycle' that encourages positive responses.
